

New risk factors for glaucoma

Contributed by Administrator
Monday, 12 November 2007

The Canadian Institute for the Blind (CNIB) released results from a large longitudinal study of 258 patients, demonstrating that gender plays an important role. Women were twice as likely as men to develop permanent visual field loss. The new risk factor identified in this study was that anticardiolipin antibodies are associated with progression.